

UNDERSTANDING OLD PEOPLE

Old Codgers and Coffin Dodgers

My Granny always said: “There’s no fun in old age,” – but is there?

Old people tend to talk about the past, is that because they have more in the past than in the future? So what’s it like to be old?

Sex. When you get old you notice that there’s not much of it about, perhaps there never was?

Sex. Your sex life depends on your memory that’s why this book is a work of fiction.

Sex. Old people come in two sexes, male and female the difference is less defined as the bodies droop, wrinkle, sag and become more hairy. Of course it’s easy to blame the years of gravitational force for the droops and sags but not the hairiness.

Sex. Sex is like air. It's only important if you aren't getting any.

Death just like birth it happens to everyone, no exceptions. Neither of these events are very memorable though.

Only the lucky get old but don’t try telling them that, they probably can’t hear what you are saying.

Always try to be nice to your children, they will be the ones who choose your care home.

Are there any advantages to being old?

If you do manage to get old, however you dress it up you are still old. If you do make it to old age then start to have some fun, everyone will excuse you just because you are old: This is a true story, at least I think it is – my memory is not what it was.
